Get Away Run

Chapter 1 by Natalie Nuno

Prologue

Sirens have ringing behind me, as I ran trying to get away. My color streaked hair flying behind me in the wind. I ran into the woods as soon as I could, my muddy combat boots getting muddier with every step. The sirens still ringing as I heard car doors swing open followed by yelling, "That way." one of them shouted.

Ok, ok. I thought to myself as I ran, trying to find something familiar. Of course it being 2 in the morning, I couldn't see much. I ran and ran as fast as I could. My legs burning with every step I took. I pushed myself to continue although my body urged me to stop. Finally I came upon a familiar sight, the lake. On the other side my home would be there. I ran through, around would take to long and they would most likely be able to catch me easier that way.

I ran and somewhat swam to the other side. I got out and ran uphill to the back of my house, finally stopping when I reach the back fence. I climb over it, however I fail to keep my balance and fall off on the other side. I scramble to my feet and run to the window of my bedroom on the second floor, still open. I climb up to the wall to window and allow myself to fall on the floor, catching my breath.
